1. ALLAN

I, Sally Walker, wish to be known as the author of this research. I declare that the research detailed herein is entirely my own. Sources have include Findmypast, Ancestry, FreeBMD, and Familysearch. Details of Parish events (Baptisms, Weddings and Burials), Civil events (Births, Marriages and Deaths) and Census events have been taken from the images available on these websites. Although every effort has been made to be 100% certain of some the family relationships identified herein it should be acknowledged that the further back you go the more likely errors will creep in. Apologies if they have. Family Historian has been used to create this document.

Death: 27 March 1943 (age 26) Firth of Clyde, Scotland
Cause: Accident at Sea. Ship sank after an explosion. Body may or may not have been recovered.
Address: HMS Dasher
William Frank ALLAN was a RN Steward on HMS Dasher. D/LX.26746 (Port Divion and Service Number). HMS Dasher was an aircraft carrier and was sunk 27th March 1943. The ship was transferred to the Royal Navy and commissioned into RN service as HMS Dasher (D37) on 2 July 1942. She participated in Operation Torch, with her sister ship Link Biter, carrying Sea Hurricanes of 804 Naval Air Squadron. After aircraft ferry duties in the Mediterranean, Dasher sailed to the Clyde in March 1943 and, having had her flight-deck lengthened by 42 ft (13 m), she embarked Fairey Swordfish aircraft. She escorted one convoy successfully, but shortly after leaving with the second, Dasher suffered engine trouble and turned back. Shortly after getting to the Firth of Clyde on 27 March 1943, she suffered a major internal explosion and sank. Various possible causes have been suggested, including one of her aircraft crashing onto the flight deck and igniting petrol fumes from leaking tanks. Much of what happened remains unknown. The death toll, 379 out of 528 crewmen, despite rapid response and assistance from ships and rescue craft from Brodick and Lamlash on the Isle of Arran and from Ardrossan and Greenock on the Scottish mainland, was amongst the highest in British home waters. Many escaped from the ship but died of hypothermia or of burns suffered when escaped fuel ignited on the water. Most of the dead were buried at Ardrossan or Greenock. The British blamed the bad design of the stowage and handling, while the US blamed the disaster on poor RN petrol-handling procedures. There were merits in both arguments, but thereafter the stowage on her British-operated sister ships was reduced from 75,000–88,000 US gal (280,000–330,000 L) down to 36,000 US gal (140,000 L), and the USN reduced theirs also but not as drastically. The government of the time, eager to avoid damage to morale and anxious to avoid any suggestion of faulty US construction, tried to cover up the sinking. The local media were ordered to make no reference to the tragedy. There were rumours that the authorities ordered the dead to be buried in an unmarked mass grave, but none had been found as of 2021, and the Royal Navy said that a mass unmarked grave would have been against Admiralty policy and that all sources relating to the sinking of HMS Dasher are in the public domain. A witness said in 2021 that survivors had told her that there was a mortuary where they were taken to identify about fifty bodies laid out, "just dumped". People living nearby saw the bodies over a high wall, "then they all disappeared". Furious relatives protested and some of the dead were returned to their families for burial. The survivors were ordered not to talk about what happened. This policy subsequently attracted much criticism. There are now memorials to those lost at both Ardrossan and Brodick.
